

By limiting the content available on satellite radio, you are limiting the value of the satellite equipment and subscription that I have paid for. I obviously felt strongly about receiving specialized programming, such as that offered by XMradio, to have invested time and money into service and equipment. I deserve to enjoy the fruits of this purchase. It is not fair to limit access of local content. And while I do enjoy the benefits of XM, I still listen to local stations quite frequently. XM has not replaced traditional local FM stations, it has merely presented me with another venue for listening to music.
